

There are so many things you can do to make your wedding unique and to personalize it but one thing to consider is what can you do so you can keep not only memories but a memento as well. One thing that you can order for your wedding is personalized candles. While its not really necessary it can make your wedding more elegant and your honeymoon more romantic. Whats more beautiful then lighting a candle for each other at your wedding and sitting in a hot tub with nothing lighting your way but bright beautiful candles. Candles are often used in Catholic weddings or in other traditions as a sign of unity. While there are several ways to personalize your wedding personalized candles are just something that adds that special touch. There are so many different ways to use the candles for your wedding. One of the most traditional ways for candles to be used as part of the centerpieces that will be placed on the tables at the reception. This helps to keep the mood loving and low key.

When ordering your candles you can personalize them by choosing certain colors which will match those of your wedding. You can choose to have unique designs carved into the candles as well as having your names engraved on them. Another unique touch would be having them placed inside of special candle holders also with your names on them. You can choose the shape, color and design of your candles. Personalized candles are often given as a wedding present from friends and relatives. They are sometimes given by the church where the ceremony is taken place as blessing depending on the religion. Personalized candles can also be used for the honeymoon. If you are a romantic groom you can surprise your new bride by prepping the honeymoon suite before you are due to arrive. Why not go the extra mile to show her how special she really is to you. Before the ceremony begins you could spread rose petals (her favorite color of course) across the floor leading into the bathroom where you will draw her a warm bath. In the bath you will have a set of small beautiful floating candles which you chose just for her. You could have the candles customized with a small poem or even a simple I Love You on them. Something this small could mean the world to your new bride. Once you arrive you will then lure her into the bathroom lowering the lights, along the way switching on some soft music, with nothing but the rose petals glowing in the flickering light of the candles it will be sure to create a very calm romantic atmosphere which will lead to a wonderful night of passion. Remember no matter what you actually use the candles for this is something that you can tuck away and use over and over to rekindle the love that you shared on that special day. They can be used on special occasions or holidays to light your families dining room. One idea that would make future anniversaries very special is planning special dinners, or even a private picnic alone. When doing this you can always bring your candles along to remind you just how precious that day really was and that no matter how many years pass it will always be cherished in your hearts.